

CEE's Inspirational Seminars

Autumn 2024

How: The seminars last 50 minutes and are open for everyone interested. They are informal in style, and you needn't register nor prepare anything. The seminars are sometimes held in English, sometimes in Swedish – see below.

Where: Teknodromen, M-huset

When: During lunchtime, between 12:10-13:00

Friday 20 September – On student presence

To be present or not to be present? Presentation of a study concerning students' views on presence in university education. Together with CEE, two student assistants have looked into the question of what drives presence in teacher-led instruction. Why do many students choose not to attend? What do they do instead? What can this mean for LTH? The seminar is led by Sandra Nilsson, Jesper Samuelsson, and Stina Regnér from CEE. Language: Swedish

Wednesday 16 October – Cultivating a sense of joy in your teaching

How do teachers reconnect with what gives them a sense of joy, purpose, and passion in their teaching? And how to share those experiences with your students? A seminar on how to start developing strategies to create situations where these emotions are likely to be experienced. The seminar is led by Mirjam Glessmer - academic developer at CEE. For a more detailed description, please see <https://www.ahu.lu.se/en/about-us/calendar/event/teaching-sustainability-cultivating-sense-joy-passion-and-purpose-your-teaching/> Language: English

Tuesday 12 November – Leadership within academia: challenges and possibilities

Leadership within academia is sometimes described as 'herding cats'. Still, it is an area that has gained more and more attention, not at least in line with the increasing bureaucracy which many of us are experiencing. Collegial leadership is a concept that can be described as ideal, but at the same time as preservative. What could it mean, and what consequences could it have for both higher education and teaching and learning? This is discussed during this seminar - led by Klara Bolander Laksov, Lise Meitner professor at CEE. Language: Swedish.